Special to THE SUN AND NEW YORK HERALD.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 5.—Mrs. Harger Wallach and Gov. R. Livingston Beekman, as members of the tennis committee at the Casino, have arranged for a public reception next Tuesday afternoon for members of the summer colony and residents of the city to meet the Davis Cup team players, who are to be seen on the courts for the first time next week after their successes in Europe. Gov. Beekman will make an address, as will Mayor Jeremiah P. Mahoney. The reception will be held at 1:30 o'clock and there will be a concert during the afternoon. The players, Messrs. William T. Tilden, R. Norris Williams, C. S. Garland and William Johnston, will come direct to Newport after the arrival of their steamer in New York.

There was much activity during the morning concert hour at the Casino today, and several special tennis games were played. Gov. Beekman and Lord Camoys played several sets. Change in Stadium Programme. Because of the continued illness of Walter Henry Rothwell, conductor of the stadium concerts at City College, the all-Tschickowsky programme arranged for tonight with Richard Bulfinch, pianist, as soloist, has been postponed to next week and a new programme has been arranged. There will be two soloists, Miss Sofia Medvedoff, soprano, and Miss Katherine Byman, pianist. The former will sing the aria "Il est des" from Massenet's "Herodiade" and the latter will play Grieg's piano concerto in a minor. Paul Zisler will conduct.

JOHN BARRYMORE, ACTOR, AND MRS. LEONARD M. THOMAS WED

Marriage Sudden, but Expected by Friends Since She Obtained Divorce.

John Barrymore, an eminent member of a family that has long been famous in the dramatic world, and Mrs. Leonard M. Thomas, formerly the wife of Leonard M. Thomas of New York and Philadelphia, were married yesterday in this city. Little surprise was expressed among their friends when they learned that the ceremony had taken place. The wedding, of equal interest to society and the stage, had been professed by frequent reports of their engagement from the time it became known that yesterday's bride had divorced her first husband in Paris last February.

Mrs. Thomas and Mr. Barrymore were married at noon in the apartment of Mrs. John H. McCullough in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. The couple dropped from sight immediately, and the only additional details their mutual relatives and friends would divulge were the facts that the ceremony had been performed by the Rev. Dr. Ballard, and that the witnesses were Mr. and Mrs. Charles May Oelrichs, Charles D. Oelrichs, brother and sister-in-law; Mrs. Russell G. Colt (Miss Edith Barrymore), sister of the bridegroom; and Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Barrymore, his brother-in-law.

After a wedding trip Mr. Barrymore and his bride will live at 155 East Seventy-ninth street. The bride had made her home in Englewood with her uncle and aunt for some time. Mr. Barrymore is a son of Mr. Frank V. Burton of this city and Newburgh, N. Y.

Mrs. Thomas gave her age as 29, her residence as the Colony Club and her profession as author. As the actor tucked the license away in his coat pocket he told the clerk he and Mrs. Thomas would be married at noon in the Ritz-Carlton.

Mrs. Barrymore's notable career on the stage culminated last August when he played "Richard III." He had previously appeared with his brother, Lionel, in "The Jew," which had a long run. While the Shakespearean revival was at the height of success the star suffered a breakdown. The play had to be withdrawn and he went to a sanatorium. It was said that he would join Mrs. Thomas in Paris, but instead, she came to New York and it was then that their engagement was reported.

A few years ago Paul Heilleu, the French etcher, called the then Mrs. Thomas the most beautiful American woman he had seen and he made a charming etching of her. She is not only noted for her beauty but for her talent. Under the name of Blanche de Michel Strange she has published several books of poems. Her chief themes have been the sorrows, pains, regrets and frustrations of love. Her poems have been widely read and much commented upon.

Audience Chuckles Over Situations in 'Scrambled Wives'

Women Authors of 'Nightly Night' Present Another Laughable Farce.

Special to THE SUN AND NEW YORK HERALD.

Adolph Klabauer, who last year kept 'Nightly Night' moving successfully during the worst of the winter to the delight of the audience, began his second season as an impresario at the Fulton Theatre last night. Gratefully he took a play from the same authors who had served him so well in the past. 'Scrambled Wives' is also the work of Miss Adelaide Matthews and Miss Martha Standish. It bears a certain family resemblance to his predecessor in material and in manner of execution.

Again have the feminine collaborators busied themselves with the troubles of wives and husbands and the little mendacities that may work havoc with their happiness if they are not found out. Again must they feverishly struggle to see that Mr. A. does not find out that Mrs. B. had a husband, especially when he happens to have a sentimental interest in the certain Mr. C. Of such material, however, must these farces be made until there is some other relation between man and woman to provide the playwrights with a new point of departure. So the inevitable standard in these plays is found in the answer to the question, 'How did they do it?' rather than 'Well, what was it all about?'

The authors, who were referred to by Mr. Klabauer, in his speech before the curtain was raised, were young women, 'had to keep the divorced wife in this case out of the sight of a young woman who would have betrayed her to a proper end, but who had no knowledge of her previous marriage. The fact that this husband was in the house party on the St. Lawrence made little difference. It was the woman who was the trouble. The expedients of the authors in this farce were somewhat less violent than those they employed in 'Nightly Night', but it was the more the spectators most.

They were diverted when the former husband was behind a curtain. They chuckled over more and more when the curtain was raised and the wife was the other window. When the husband accidentally revealed his presence by a sneeze their merriment knew no bounds. As the play progressed the wife was ever to their own former style and the familiar stench of others in view of their success.

There were many other scenes which depicted the quietest and the three acts were played to all but continuous laughter. The play kept in the frothiest vein. It never departed from its obvious intent to amuse with as little effort as possible. The play was a comedy of situation, never of character. Mr. Klabauer's company was uncommonly well chosen. The lion's share of the fun was provided by Roland Young, whose deliberate and somewhat mannered never brought to bear on a more appropriate role than the puzzled woman. Miss Juliette Day played the divorced wife plausibly, rather in the manner of the musical play.

Miss Marie Chambers, pretty and intelligent, Miss Betty Barnum, with a really natural gift for comedy; Miss Bessie Goodwin, who played the part of the wife who was the other window, were the other stars of the company.

SEIZE PARIS WRITER FOR TRUNK MURDER

Hera Mirtel, Fiction Author, Slays Her Husband and Is Aided by Daughter.

Special to THE SUN AND NEW YORK HERALD.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—The climax in the Paris crime wave came last night with the discovery that a prominent fiction writer known as Hera Mirtel had murdered her husband, Georges Besarabo, a wealthy representative of Tampico (Mexico) oil companies. After killing him she packed his body in a trunk, which she shipped to Nancy. Then she left Paris with her pretty twenty-year-old daughter by a previous marriage for Montmorency.

Mme. Besarabo has admitted the crime, at the same time giving details of marital disagreement caused by her husband's heavy trunk in the railroad station. The chauffeur, noting M. Besarabo's absence, told the police, who traced the trunk to its destination and opened it in the presence of the woman, who confessed.

It was stated today that Mme. Besarabo, who developed unusual ability as a writer of short stories and also as a dramatist, was a woman of normal character, which, it is believed, caused her to develop the high nervous tension which led to the crime, amidst the calmness with which she carried out the deed.
